Are Li-ion batteries transparent?

Li-ion batteries are not opaque as usual, but rather appear transparent due to patterned electrode materials covering only a small portion of the whole area and the pattern features being smaller than the detection limit of human eyes. Li-ion batteries with different transparencies were fabricated, such as a full cell with an energy density of Wh/L, including packaging.

What is a transparent battery?

(A) The schematic of a transparent battery with grid-like patterned electrodes. In contrast to using thin film electrodes, this concept allows scalable energy storage while maintaining high transparency. The different colors indicate the PDMS substrate (light blue), electrode materials (black), and metal current collector (yellow).

Can transparent materials be used as battery materials?

Some transparent materials, such as indium oxide (In_2O_3), could be used as battery components. However, upon charging, metal nanoparticles and lithium oxides are formed, significantly deteriorating the transparency (Figs. S1 and S2) (17).

Can transparent batteries be used in fully integrated transparent devices?

Transparent devices have recently attracted substantial attention. Various applications have been demonstrated, including displays, touch screens, and solar cells; however, transparent batteries, a key component in fully integrated transparent devices, have not yet been reported.

What is the transparency of a battery?

The feature dimension in the electrode is below the resolution limit of human eyes, and, thus, the electrode appears transparent. Moreover, by aligning multiple electrodes together, the amount of energy stored increases readily without sacrificing the transparency. This results in a battery with energy density of $10\text{--}160\text{ Wh/L}$ at a transparency of 60%.

Can semitransparent thin film batteries be fabricated on glass substrates?

In this paper, semitransparent thin film batteries (TFBs) with a grid-structured design have been fabricated on glass substrates using specific photolithography and etching processes to achieve $\text{LiCoO}_2/\text{LiPON}/\text{Si}$ structures below human eye resolution. UV-vis transmittances up to 60% have been measured for the obtained TFBs.
